Writing from St. Petersburg on July M. THE SUN'S correspondent says: "Among kinds of Russians the abiding impressi left by the Emperor's conference has in it a large element of humiliation. The meeting did not really surprise people here, but it set out clearly before their eyes the horrible irony of a man constituted by character and temperament as is Nicholas being actually the autocrat over a bigger slice of humanity than anybody else in the world. Nobody here doubts that the Kaiser made up the Czar's mind for him. Two other minent autocrate, the Sultans of Turkey and Morocco, have found on important occasions that their interests coincided opportunely with the Kaiser's, and now the Autocrat of all the Russias makes a docile third.

"This, of course, is an offense to all independent minded Russians. To them the chief concern is, not what advice was offered or what taken, but the great patent fact that at a moment when everything that the name of Russia stands for is passing through the most terrible crisis in its history the hereditary, absolute ruler of her destinies should go to a masterful foreigner whose very definite convictions are Germany first. second and all the time, and learn from him the next best thing to do for Russia.

The Czar's own people see in this another of those heavy strokes of fate that have fallen one after another throughout his dismal reign ever since thousands of his peasants trampled one another to death m the day of his coronation."

It is only natural, perhaps, that the Russians in the present miserable condition of their fortunes should regard chiefly this aspect of the case. Others, however, anxiously scrutinize every possible spot where and when the Kaiser's hands may next appear. The opinion is distinctly growing that in addition to a discussion of the war and Russia's internal condition the Kaiser put forward prominently at the meeting the Scandinavian question. He is increasingly anxious to form a Scandinavian dreibund, which has already been referred to in these letters.

A writer in the Echo de Paris yesterday outliness the German scheme in an article which has attracted much attention. Refarring to Emperor William's anxiety to weate a Scandinavian confederation of which he would be the great protector, the sticle proceeds:

His candidate for the Norwegian throne would not be a Hohenzollern, but a Danish Prince. That candidature would be an teellent means of reconciling Germany and Denmark: Such a combination would necessarily excite the distrust of Russia, who would, as a matter of fact, have much to lose and little to gain from the constitution of a united Scandinavia, whose sympathies she could never secure. It was therefore necessary for the Kaiser to seek some ingenious means of diminishing Russian mistrust by offering serious compensation. It would consist of proposing to the Czar, with the consent of Norway, a rectification of the frontier which would crooked work and was let go, but a close give Russia Lyngen Flord, a magnificent eye was kept on him. ice free roadstead on the Norwegian coast.

The strangest feature of the matter is the fact that Russia has long been desirous of obtaining possession of Lyngen Fiord, that desire having been one of the causes of the Crimean War. Note the marvelous Machiavellianism of the German policy, which, in endeavoring to revive the question of Lyngen Fiord, hopes, while facilitating the Scandinavian scheme, to create a serious source of friction between Russia and England. The visit of the Kaiser to Copenhagen immediately following the Bjoerkoe conference gives a striking consistency to the German schemes just set forth."

The Speciator devotes an article to speculation as to what the Kaiser probably advised in regard to peace and the internal arrangement of Russia. Pointing out that China has an obvious claim to a voice in the disposal of manchuria and is otherwise in a position to claim consideration, the Spectator suggests that the Kaiser use his great influence at Pekin to throw Chinese reight on the Russian side of the scale, and then try to secure a peace which while it will arrest actual war will leave Russians and Japanese glaring at each other as potential foes who are unable to afford great enterprises lest their rivals take advantage of the opportunity. Such a peace would probably concede an indemnity, but would leave North Manchuria in Russian

It is suggested that the Kaiser, with the same object of keeping his Russian neighbor sufficiently weak to relieve him from anxiety in Europe, will have to recommend concessions in regard to a constitution. As an upholder of the divine rights of kings, the Kaiser might be expected to uphold the Czar in opposition to anything contrary to the monarchical principles, but, on the other hand, most Germans believe that a constitution in Ruseia would greatly diminish the danger from the eastern border, for, the Speciator says, "mobilization with a parliament is far more difficult usually and far slower than without one, and a declaration of war in a constitutional monarchy requires reasons which are acceptable to the people.'

MARBLE MOSQUE FOR LONDON. TORTURED PILIPINGS IN COURT College for Presclytes.

London, July 29.—Among the many additions to London's architectural beaules which have been planned a prominent place must be assigned to a new Mohammedan mosque which has been designed by a well known architect who is now at the Rhedive's court studying arabesque designs for the walls and floors. The mosque will be built of marble. The site is on the Thames on the Lambeth side, almost opposite Westminster Abbey, where also will be a monastery for teaching such Englishmen as will consent to go out as missionaries as well as a reception place for proselytes who are to be instructed in the tenets of Islam. There will also be a college where Moslems will be able to study more where mosisms will be able to study more cheaply than anywhere else in England.

The Shah of Persia, the Khedive of Egypt, the Amir of Afghanistan, the Nizam of Hyderabad, the Rajah of Rampur and a number of opulent Indian princes and chieftains have subscribed toward this scheme and have expressed their intention of helping it in every way.

return of the bankruptoles in Great Britain for 1904 shows that they numbered 8,631. of which 487 were failures of women. The total liabilities were £12,086,857. The estimated loss to creditors was £9,871,780.

The Inspector-General calls attention to the great use made of their wives by bankrupts, the wife being put up as the principal and the husband as uming the position of manager. He also points out the steady decline in the desire of bankrupts to obtain their discharge. Since 1883 there have been 89,583 adjudications and only 19,186 applications for discharge. The evils caused by the growing population of undischarged bankrupts have been brought to the attention of the Board of Trade. It must be remembered that a bankrupt can get credit up to £20 without informing the tradesmen hat he is a bankrupt

RARE SHAKESPEARE EDITIONS. American Purchaser for Some of Thom at London Sale.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, July 29.—The last book sale of the season at Sotheby's to-day realized $23,875. BIG ED. RICE A TEAMSTER. He Helped Jimmie Hope in the $2,000,000

Bank Robbery. CHICAGO, July 29.—Big Ed Rice, who with Jimmie Hope and Big Frank McCoy robbed a Northampton, Mass., bank of $2,000,000 in 1877, has been driving a wagon for one of the downtown retail houses during the late teamsters' strike.

Lieut. Madden of the Central station said

"We have known for some time that Rice was here. Detectives picked him up and he accounted for himself as being out of all

"While Rice is getting on in years he looks husky and appears to be able to take care of himself. He can stay in Chicago so long as he behaves himself, and I under stand that he does mean to behave; that he has passed up all his lawbreaking."

Rice in his days of crime was known as one of the cleverest bank thieves and conone of the cleverest bank thieves and confidence men in the United States. He helped Hoban rob the Bank of Halifax, N. S., of '$20,000, but his big exploit was his companionship with the men who planned the Northampton robbery, for which he never was punished. Hope and McCoy died last month, but Rice lives to handle the reins at $5 per day. He appeared in Chicago several months ago. When the strike situation grew bad and teamsters were badly needed he applied for a driver's position, and secured it without his employer knowing who he was.

AMENDS HIS TALE OF WO. Jerseymen Says He Was Robbed, Then Changes Story of the Details.

A man who said he was Andrew Clark, Jr., of 122 Morris avenue, Newark, N. J., went to the West Twentieth street station yesterday afternoon and told the police he had been robbed of a gold watch worth $150 while on his way from the Grand Cen-tral strtion to the Twenty-third street ferry.

He said he was riding in a couré with another man whom he didn't know, and that in Twenty-fourth street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues, the man took his watch away from him and threw him out of the couré.

Afterward Clark changed his story. He said he was robbed of his watch before he

The Weather.

Unsettled and showery conditions prevailed generally east of the Rocky Mountains yesterday. Thunderstorms with heavy rains occurred in Georgia, South Dakots, Michigan and Alabama. Georgia, South Dakota, Michigan and Alabama. There was a large area of low pressure of slight energy covering the Central States, the Lake regions, the Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic States, with moderate areas of high pressure in the Guif States, in the St. Lawrence Valley and over Minnesota. It was warmer in the Ohio Valley and only slightly warmer in the middle Atlantic States and slightly cooler in all other districts.

In this city the day was cloudy, with scattered rains in the morning: in the afternoon a heavy shower fell uptown; wind, light to fresh easterly; average humidity. 77 per cent.; barometer, cor-

Cihera With Tongues and Lips Stashed -- Aguinaldo, Former Insurgent Leader. a Witness in Libet Case-Describes Himself as a Farmer-Crowd to See Him

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN MANILA, July 29 .- Emilio Aguinaldo testifled to-day in the Renacimento libel case. The former insurgent leader described himself as a farmer.

Three editors of the Renacimento, the most influential of the Filipino organs, were arrested on the charge of libeling Capt. Baker of the constabulary, whom they charged with cruelty in the Cavite campaign.
Aguinaldo testified that a constabulary. officer visited his farm and compelled him to go to headquarters, where he was urged to nfluence Felizardo and Montolon, two ladrone leaders, to surrender. He refused to do so, alleging that he had no influence with the ladrones. Thereupon Capt. Baker swore at him and insulted him. He said he knew of several constabulary outrages. He said that ladronism was steadily diminishing.

Prosecuting Attorney Smith crossexamined Aguinaldo. The former insurgent leader became pitifully rattled. He abandoned his attempt to speak in Spanish and testified in the Tagalog dialect through an interpreter. He reiterated the statement that he was leading a retired life as an example to his countrymen, but was forced to admit that he had been familiar with the raids of Felizardo and Montoion.

Just at this time Aguinaldo was dramatically and suddenly confronted with five horribly tortured Filipinos who had been rescued and succored by the constabulary. One of these, 73 years of age, had had his tongue sliced, one had been hamstrung, two others had been hamstrung and their lips hideously out up, and one had his legs hacked off by the Cavite ladrones. This created an extraordinary sensation. Hundreds crowded the court room for half the day waiting for and afterward listening to the testimony of Aguinaldo.

RUINING THE UNIONIST PARTY. That's the Charge Against Balfour, Chamberiain and Their Followers.

Special Cable Desphich to THE SUN. LONDON, July 29 .- "Most sesuredly the Unionist party is perishing under the treatment it has received and is receiving from Mr. Balfour, Mr. Chamberlain and those who support them. Every month that passes makes its condition worse. Indeed, it is hardly too much to say that if Balfour contrives by Parliamentary finesse and because of the unwillingness of his sup-porters to face the painful but salutary operation of dissolution to keep in power another year, the Unionist party will by that time be well nigh extinct."

Thus speaks the Spectator in an article seaded "The Ruin of the Unionist Party." This weighty conservative organ is undoubtedly much influenced by its strong opposition to Mr. Chamberlain's tariff form, but in drawing up an indictment against the present Government it makes a strong case against it.

It cannot be denied that Balfour's administration has left the impression of want of dignity and candor in the general conduct of affairs, especially in such matters as the Irish administration and the redistribution of seats. The effect of its dealings with the army have been little short of disastrous. The upper ranks of the regular army are distracted and discontented. It is an open secret that there are piles of fficers' resignations at the War Office which it cannot, it dare not, accept. The state of affairs in the militia volunteers is equally bad, but it is not necessary to take in detail the causes of the Government's undisguisable unpopularity. It is through the enormous importance of ne foreign policy, with Europe as it now is in the melting pot, that Balfour has clung to office. It is true that England's foreign policy is to an enormous extent continuous, and if the Opposition came into office to-morrow, it would be carried on on the present lines, but it is equally true that European Chancelleries do not feel this way and changes of foreign Ministers in England would inspire them with a feeling of insecurity and instability which would be very detrimental to the interest of the British Foreign Office.

BARMAIDS TOO FLIRTATIOUS. Talk to Young Men and Neglect Other Customers, Says a Minister.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, July 29 .- In recent years various religious and social bodies have been conducting an agitation against the employment of barmaids. These afforts have met with little success or encouragement, but the Wesleyan conference at Bristol has approached the barmaid question from a new viewpoint. Reform and not abolition of the barmaid is advocated. No aspersions were cast on the girls' moral characters, but one minister complained that during the night time in railway station bars crowds of young men stood talking to the barmaids while persons who came in and wanted ordinary refreshments were utterly neglected and left to go without food. A resolution was adopted to the affect that representations should be made to the railway companies that from 10 o'clock at night until 8 in the morning no women should be behind the bars.
